For two decades, Ike and Tina Turner were the hardest working couple in show business. The Ike and Tina Revue crisscrossed the country, playing before audiences that became progressively larger and more ecstatic. With the sexy and suggestive Ikettes a foil for Tina's dynamic singing and the crack band, the Ike and Tina Revue created pandemonium wherever they performed.

In 1966, Ike and Tina were signed by Phil Spector who felt he could break the duo beyond the R&B market and make their records in a style that would fit into the lucrative rock market. Spector produced the controversial "River Deep, Mountain High," which was a top 10 hit in England and helped introduce the Ike and Tina Revue to a new audience.

The duo had remarkable commercial success by reinterpreting rock standards like "Proud Mary." "I Want To Take You Higher," "I Wish It Would Rain," "Come Together" and "Honky Tonk Woman." Tina began to step out of the shadow of Ike and her voice begins to suggest power and independence. That same commanding voice made originals like "A Love Like Yours" and "Nutbush City Limits" memorable.

Being that Ike and Tina Turner recorded for a plethora of labels during a 15 year period, assembling a true Greatest Hits package is truly a daunting task. However after two years of assembling material from various sources, Aim Records has put together probably the most complete Ike and Tina Turner collection available. These excellent and historic tracks are the legacy of Ike and Tina.
